

CONVECTION APPARATUS

This apparatus consists of two acrylic chimneys mounted on the top of metal box with the removable glass in front. It is designed to study the convection currents in the air. Convection currents are visible in a metal box that are produced by the candle that placed under one chimney and a smoke producing material held in the other chimney.

